

RCN Representatives of the Year

1. Introduction

The RCN Representatives of the Year Award is for accredited RCN representatives or 'Reps' (learning representatives, health and safety representatives and stewards) who have made a difference in their workplace and shown outstanding commitment to the RCN and its members. There are three awards:

Health and Safety Rep of the Year

Learning Rep of the Year

Steward of the Year.

2. Who can be nominated

RCN Members (in the category of Nurse or Nursing Support Worker) eligible for the Representatives of the Year Award must be fully-accredited RCN representatives in one of the following three areas:

Health and Safety Representative

Learning Representative

Steward

Current members of the Professional Nursing Committee, Trade Union Committee, and RCN Council are not eligible for nomination.

Individuals can only be awarded an RCN Rep of the Year Award in the same representation category once.

3. Criteria

Nominees must be an RCN accredited RCN representatives (learning representatives, health and safety representatives and stewards) who have made a difference in their workplace and shown outstanding commitment to the RCN and its members.

The criteria considered by the Awards Committee are:

1. Impact: How did the nominee make a difference in the workplace or to other members? Did others learn from what they did, and has anything changed in the workplace more widely because of it?
2. Benefit: What were the benefits of what the nominee did – either to the individual they represented or to the workplace as a whole?

3. Uniqueness: What was special about the way they did this? For example what personal qualities did they exhibit and how they go about it?
4. Equity, diversity and inclusion: How has the individual demonstrated an active commitment to equity, diversity and inclusion?

4. How to nominate

Nominators do not need to be an RCN member, they can be any individual who:

- have been personally supported and represented by an exceptional RCN representative

- are a manager or employer of a representative who has made a real difference in your workplace

- have witnessed exceptional service and support by an RCN representative.

Please note that representatives are not able to nominate themselves.
